<td>1. Khanyisa Bunu is a schoolteacher from the small town of Whittlesea in the Eastern Cape. She is the founder and coach of the Soul Buddies Football Club (SBFC). This women's football team plays in the Provincial League, and was twice provincial champion of the Eastern Cape. Two of their players, Phumuzo Thunyezwa and Hleliwe Nkitha, play for Banyana Banyana, the national women's football team.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. But, says 37-year-old Khanyisa, building a women's team and getting as far as the provincials wasn't easy. Because soccer is still seen as a male sport, she first had to overcome the problem of finding women who wanted to play. Then she had to deal with resistance from their families.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. &quot;People think that girls who play soccer are strange and they call us ugly names. The families of girls who showed an interest were afraid their children would be rejected by others,&quot; she says.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. But this didn't put Khanyisa off her dream of starting a women's team. She spread the word that she wanted to train young girls to become soccer champions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. In 2000 Soul Buddies was born with enough members to form a full team with reserve players. Khanyisa says that the public doesn't come to support them at local matches unless there are male teams playing as well. Men's soccer is taken more seriously than women's soccer. As a result, sponsorship deals are few and far between, so money is tight for the team.</td>

TEXT B

BEAUTIFUL BEADS

1. As long ago as 1000 AD Arab ships were sailing down the coast of Africa and trading with the local people. Beads were valuable because there was no glass-blowing technology in Africa and they were in demand. Beads were traded for animal hides and other products. In those days beads were a symbol of wealth and status and usually only royals wore glass beads.

2. Traditionally, specific beadwork items are worn for a number of reasons, e.g. to distinguish young girls from their older sisters, to identify engaged girls, to decorate brides and young mothers.

3. Among the Xhosas in the former Transkei, special beadwork indicates people's age groups. In some rural areas of Africa babies wear little in the way of clothing and usually wear a bead necklace before they're dressed in clothes. Young children often wear beaded arm and ankle bands.

4. Beadwork is common in Africa, but particularly well known is the beadwork made by Zulu women. They use beadwork for more than just decoration; the colours and patterns are a kind of language of love which is used to send messages to the opposite sex. In Zulu beadwork the triangle shape is important. This shape is a symbol for a mother, father and child. The position of the triangle also has meaning: an upside-down triangle indicates an unmarried man and an ordinary triangle denotes an unmarried woman. Seven colours are mostly used for Zulu beadwork: black, white, red, yellow, blue, pink and green.

5. Beautiful African beadwork is popular with tourists. These days you can find new and colourful beadwork items for sale at stalls, markets and on the pavements of towns and cities of South Africa.

TEXT C

Volunteer work, or work for the benefit of the community without pay, does not only benefit the organisation that you work with – it benefits many people in your community who need your help. There are many organisations that want to make a difference in other people's lives. This is not possible without volunteers. International Volunteers' Day on 5 December reminds us that we can contribute to society by giving our time and energy without expecting payment.

Helping others gives you personal fulfilment; it also gives you the ability to understand the people around you who are less fortunate. Volunteering empowers you with skills that most employers need in the workplace. Valuable experience is gained free of charge. Volunteers get a change of atmosphere and a new challenge. It certainly boosts your self-esteem and confidence.

The most important thing in volunteering is that you need to be committed. You will be able to use your skills and apply your expertise. Helping in an organisation provides you with a great opportunity for self-assessment. Another advantage is that you will get to know about the project you are involved in as well as the community. Charity organisations confirm that most volunteers remain motivated because their spare time is spent on a good cause, which gives a strong sense of fulfilment.

QUESTION 7

ROPPIE – Jack Cope

Messages were sent out and more humans arrived at the lip of the dock, dark figures with white caps, railway police, one of them armed with a rifle. He had come to give the prisoner the mercy shot.

All the while Roppie was lurching up and down with his clumsy dry-land gait, flippers and tail, flippers and tail. He looked quite small and pitiful down in the dock nearly fifty feet below. But from near-by, at his own level, he was truly bulky, and there was a fine sheen on his dark coat; his eyes were large and steady and sad, looking about uncertainly and then at the impossibly distant blue sky.

7.1 Who is the "prisoner" referred to in line 3 of the extract? (1)

7.2 In what way did he resemble a prisoner? (2)

Dr. Beyers did not know that there had ever been an understanding between Michiel and Ellie. Nobody knew. Her attitude to him was that of a stranger: and Michiel accepted it, avoiding the sickroom as much as possible. After several months, Ellie was still nursing the sick woman with the greatest care and patience. For Michiel the situation was becoming daily more intolerable; the presence, in the same house, of the woman he loved, tormented him.

8.2 Ellie treated Michiel like a stranger. What would you have done in her position? (2)

QUESTION 10

MINING ENGINEER – C Louis Leipoldt

"What do you propose?"

"I thought of a luncheon, President. At the hotel. Then he and you can make speeches. It need only last an hour or so, and we need not invite so many folk. I could do it for, say, twenty pounds."

"And where are we to get twenty pounds from, nephew?"

"I shall have to scrape it together from somewhere, President. If I have your permission, I could make a plan. There is hardly time to call an Executive Council meeting, is there?"

"You don't need an Executive Council meeting. Make a plan, do. Provided it is not more than twenty pounds, you may give the Portuguese gentleman his luncheon. I should not like him to go away and think that we were inhospitable."

The Treasurer left the presence and strolled down Church Street, thinking out a plan. On the square he chanced upon the farmer who had offered twenty pounds for the land adjoining his own. It was barren land, rocky land, scarcely good enough for grazing. Nobody else had offered to buy it, and the farmer's offer dated back eighteen months. But the Treasurer had an inspiration.

HOW TABLE MOUNTAIN GOT ITS CLOUD – IAN COLVIN

NOTE: Answer the questions on BOTH extracts.

EXTRACT A

Puff, puff, puff. A cloud of smoke was now about them; it swirled and eddied as it rose. It leaped the gulf from the Peak to the Mountain and clung to its rocky sides. It covered the top like a cloth. Then it rose even higher like the smoke of the bottle the fisherman opened in the 'Arabian Nights', until it became a great pyramid over the mountain. It swung this way and that; long shreds of it fell away and swept down the precipices to the town below. Such a south-easter had never been seen …

QUESTION 12

THE VOTER – Chinua Achebe

Election morning: that great day every five years when the people exercise power. Weather-beaten posters on the walls of houses, tree trunks and telegraph poles. The few that were still in one piece called out their message to those who could read. Vote for the People’s Alliance Party! Vote for the Progressive Organisation Party! Vote for PAP! Vote for POP! The posters that were torn, called out as much of the message as they could. As usual the Honourable Marcus Ibe was doing things in grand style. He had hired a band from Umruru and stationed it near the voting booths. Many villagers danced to the music, their ballot papers held aloft, before proceeding to the booths. Chief the Honourable Marcus Ibe sat in the ‘owner’s corner’ of his enormous green car and smiled and nodded.

QUESTION 13

A BEKKERSDAL MARATHON – Herman Charles Bosman

It all happened through dominee Welthagen one Sunday morning going into a trance in the pulpit. And we did not realise that he was in a trance. It was an illness that overtook him in a strange and sudden fashion.

At each service the predikant, after reading a passage from the Bible, would lean forward with his hand on the pulpit rail and give out the number of the hymn we had to sing. For years his manner of conducting the service had been exactly the same. He would say, for instance: ‘We will now sing Psalm 82, verses 1 to 4.’ Then he would allow his head to sink forward on to his chest, and he would remain rigid, as though in prayer, until the last notes of the hymn died away in the church.

QUESTION 14

THE JACKAL – Hannah Browne

Suddenly his mind cleared. They were vermin, these cuddly red balls of movement. Tomorrow they would be big and lethal, killing the sheep that survived this terrible drought. He picked up a large stone, lifted it high above his head, then threw it away from him with all his might. He could not do it, he could not kill these beautiful creatures.

Shoulders sagging, he walked away. What would he do, his mother depended on him? He had to care for their flock; to make sure the lambs came to no harm. His mother loved this farm. Maybe he could tell old Taboets to come down and kill the cubs. But he knew he would not do that either. So he walked on, kicking at the stones as he went.

QUESTION 15

THE LUNCHEON – W Somerset Maugham

She ate the caviar and she ate the salmon. She talked gaily of art and literature and music. But I wondered what the bill would come to. When my mutton chop arrived she took me quite seriously to task.

'I see that you're in the habit of eating a heavy luncheon. I'm sure it's a mistake. Why don't you follow my example and just eat one thing? I'm sure you'd feel ever so much better for it.'

'I am only going to eat one thing,' I said, as the waiter came again with the bill of fare.

She waved him aside with an airy gesture.

'No, no, I never eat anything for luncheon. Just a bite, I never want more than that, and I eat that more as an excuse for conversation than anything else.'

QUESTION 16

PLYMOUTH – Mervyn Woodrow

He began to feel irritated with himself, with his hesitation and doubts, with his new jacket and tight town boots. The corn plaster on the little toe of his left foot didn't help at all. And the pound notes in the tobacco pouch in his pocket weighed heavily on his conscience. They represented many months of hawking with the mule cart. The price of ten fully grown oxen at least. Was it worth it?

In answer, the image of the Railway truck and Corrie with his blue cap intruded vividly on his mind's eye. Humpf! No turning back now like a fool or worse a coward. Had he not carefully watched the driver of the Railway bus? Boet, Corrie's friend, had allowed him to sit in the passenger seat the whole way from Lejuma Halt to the railway station at Waterpoort. He had seen Boet push his left boot onto the left pedal everytime he moved the stick with the black knob on it.
