PRESCRIBED POETRY

QUESTION 1: POETRY – ESSAY QUESTION

'FIVE SENSES' – Paul Scott

With close reference to personification and the way the poet signs, discuss how he expresses his identity as a Deaf person.

Your essay should be 2–3 minutes.

- Use the following points, among others, as a guide to marking this question. Responses might differ, depending on the candidate's sensitivity to and understanding of the poem.
- Refer to the rubric on page 25 to assess this question.

Personification

In the poem, five senses are personified and the poet relates to each sense as if each sense has a human quality. We see this in the following ways:

- The poet prompts the sense to 'wake up' and the sense responds.
- After explaining its purpose, each sense goes to 'sleep' again.
- Except for the sense of hearing, the other senses have the confidence that they are able to function independently. This can be seen in their confident signing.
- Touch, taste, smell and hearing/sight senses express appreciation and are proud of what they are able to do.
- The hearing sense showed a negative expression twice as it was unable to explain its purpose but this does not mean it is dysfunctional.
- The little finger retracts itself again. Then both the little finger and the fourth finger get up together because the little finger (sight) supports the hearing sense. They explain to the poet that they are interdependent.

How poet signs

- The poet maps the senses onto his hand which shows his creative use of Sign Language.
- The poet has eye contact with each sense in a similar way that they would if speaking to another Deaf person.
- The way the poet taps the senses to wake them up is reminiscent of the culturally appropriate way Deaf people call each other.
- The poet communicates with each sense in Sign Language.
- The poet uses rich NMFs throughout the poem which is integral when Deaf people sign.
- Each sense engages in a conversation with the poet and explains its function by using visual vernacular/classifiers which is a prominent feature in Deaf discourse.
- The ending of the poem the poet use a hand shape which represents a concept dominant in Deaf culture.
Deaf identity

- In the poem the senses of hearing and sight are presented as interdependent. The sense of sight supports the inability to hear. The 'hearing' and 'sight' senses have a powerful function because they are combined. Deaf people do not consider themselves as being disabled and they are able to function effectively with the other senses. The concept of the entire poem revolves around a 'Deaf issue'.
- The most prominent feature of Deaf identity in the poem links to the personification of friendship/dependency between the last two senses. This indicates that the man experiences the world through his receptive abilities. A friendship/bond is a positive depiction of the connection between 'hearing' and 'sight' senses and thus indicates Deaf identity.
- Though the fourth sense shows its negative response, this sense acknowledges that it is dependent on the 'seeing' sense. Deaf people in reality acknowledge that 'seeing' sense is replacing 'hearing' sense.
- The poet does not conclude the fact that he needs medical support such as cochlear implants. In his conclusion he expresses that he can absorb rich information while seeing/observing/visualising.
- The poet has the powerful conclusion that never shows any negative impacts/conclusions/thoughts/images/emotions. He ends the poem confidently with a high self-esteem.
- There are flowing hand movements that indicate positivity and confidence.
- It is clear that the theme of Deaf identity is exhibited through the self-confidence and appreciation of these experiences.

QUESTION 8: SHORT STORY – ESSAY QUESTION

'A CHILDREN'S GARDEN' by ELLA MAE LENTZ

The personal beliefs and values of an author are often reflected in their literature. Use contextual evidence to support the author's views with reference to Deaf education.

The length of your essay should be 5–6 minutes.

- Below is the basis for answering this essay. Use the following as a guideline only. However, also allow for answers that are different, original and show evidence of critical thought and interpretation.
- A range of examples may be used by the candidates to support their arguments.
- Refer to the rubric on page 26 to assess this question.

- The author expresses her strong Christian beliefs by using a biblical allegory in the story.
- She expresses that language is a gift to people, including Deaf people. Language is a gift from God to all mankind.
- Ella says that Deaf children are lonely and wondering if they inferior, this might stem from her own experience or beliefs.
- Ella emphases those Deaf children are special comparing them to colourful blooms because they are different and diverse. Ella's choice of colourful blooms that are depicted in a positive light indicates that Ella is proud of her Deaf identity and culture and the beauty of ASL.
- When she signs they should LEARN EXPERIENCE THRIVE her NMFs support her believes in this.
- The action of the blooms that is transplanted into the garden is done in a gentle and caring way and her broad smile reflects the author's positive attitude toward the Deaf institution.
- Author reflects that when the Deaf children were brought together they were nervous/scared/overwhelmed but excited because they were all learning to sign together. This intimate knowledge can only come from personal experience or close observation.
- Her NMF which is joyful when she signs the Deaf children signing to one another and were developing their confidence when they were brought together, shows her personal believes that the Deaf institution is the best place for Deaf learners.
- Ella emphases that by using their native language, there is freedom of speech and a connectedness causing the garden/Deaf community to grow.
- Oralists are shown as proud/superior who look down on the Deaf community. She shows her feelings against oralism with her exaggerated disgusted facial expression.

• Her unbelief when the garden decreases in size shows her disappointment.
• Ella's description of the rain, sun and wind which is spurred to action shows that she believes Deaf people should not just passively accept the status quo forced upon them by oralists.
• At the end of the story she is determined that the language of the Deaf will continue on and not be eradicated.
• The array of factual references with regard to the past indicates that Ella is knowledgeable about Deaf history. She advocates for ASL to be respected, accepted and worthy.

- After the Milan Congress experts around the world agreed that oralism would be the best approach for Deaf education.
- They wanted the Deaf society to feel part of the hearing society and were willing to do anything to accomplish that.
- They believed Deaf people should be able to function/communicate in a hearing world.
- They wanted Deaf people to be 'normal' like them.
Their motive was not acceptable because:
- They were harming the Deaf children.
- They were infringing on the language rights of the Deaf children.
- The brown area did not consider the needs of the Deaf children.
- They were violent in their actions to force change.
- They were the oppressors/destroyers.

9.10

The signer insinuates that oralism is not acceptable for Deaf individuals.

Critically discuss this insinuation made in the story.

- For Deaf individuals Sign Language is natural. When the blooms where gently moved to the garden where they communicate using their natural language they looked shy at first then they were pleased and happy to be amongst people of the same language.
- Forcing Deaf individuals to follow oralism is a violation of their linguistic rights. We see in the text with the blooms dying/ negative NMFs when she signs TRACTOR.
- Mainstream schools do not allow Deaf learners to grow in their strengths and so they wither and die.
- They do not develop strong linguistic identities because they are isolated.
