Ligama lami ngu:

The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify the needs of the target market. This involves conducting market research to understand the wants and needs of potential customers. The research can be qualitative or quantitative, depending on the type of information required. Qualitative research involves collecting non-numerical data through methods such as interviews, focus groups, and case studies. Quantitative research involves collecting numerical data through methods such as surveys and experiments. Once the needs of the target market are identified, the next step is to develop a product concept. This involves defining the product's features, benefits, and positioning. The product concept should be unique and differentiated from existing products in the market. The final step is to develop a marketing plan to promote the product and reach the target market. This involves setting goals, identifying key messages, and selecting appropriate channels for communication.
