FOREWORD

The Department of Basic Education has pleasure in releasing a subject exemplar booklet for School Based Assessment (SBA) to assist and guide teachers with the setting and development of standardised SBA tasks and assessment tools. The SBA booklets have been written by teams of subject specialists to assist teachers to adapt teaching and learning methods to improve learner performance and the quality and management of SBA.

The primary purpose of this SBA exemplar booklet is to improve the quality of teaching and assessment (both formal and informal) as well as the learner’s process of learning and understanding of the subject content. Assessment of and for learning is an ongoing process that develops from the interaction of teaching, learning and assessment. To improve learner performance, assessment needs to support and drive focused, effective teaching.

School Based Assessment forms an integral part of teaching and learning, its value as a yardstick of effective quality learning and teaching is firmly recognised. Through assessment, the needs of the learner are not only diagnosed for remediation, but it also assists to improve the quality of teaching and learning. The information provided through quality assessment is therefore valuable for teacher planning as part of improving learning outcomes.

Assessment tasks should be designed with care to cover the prescribed content and skills of the subject as well as include the correct range of cognitive demand and levels of difficulty. For fair assessment practice, the teacher must ensure that the learner understands the content and has been exposed to extensive informal assessment opportunities before doing a formal assessment activity.

The exemplar tasks contained in this booklet, developed to the best standard in the subject, is aimed to illustrate best practices in terms of setting formal and informal assessment. Teachers are encouraged to use the exemplar tasks as models to set their own formal and informal assessment activities.

ADDENDUM

QUESTION 1: WHAT WAS THE IMPACT OF THE 1913 NATIVES LAND ACT ON BLACK SOUTH AFRICANS?

SOURCE 1A
This source, by a historian, comments on the impact of 1913 Natives Land Act on Black South Africans.

The first major test for the new organisation (The South African Native National Congress, established in 1912) soon presented itself. Building on earlier ideas of segregation … the Union government embarked on a policy of territorial segregation, laying aside land for the exclusive use of whites and blacks (the latter being restricted to less than ten per cent of the country) – through the Natives Land Act (1913).

Thousands of families of tenant farmers were forced off white-owned land, either into the ‘scheduled areas’ or into towns. In the famous words of Solomon Plaatje, one of the founders of the ANC: ‘Awaking on Friday morning, 20 June 1913, the South African native found himself, not actually a slave, but a pariah (social outcast) in the land of his birth.’

[From: Nelson Mandela and the rise of the ANC by J Schadeberg]

This source, extracted from an interview undertaken by Sol Plaatje after the 1913 Natives Land Act was passed, explains the impact that the implementation of the 1913 Natives Land Act had on Africans in general and specifically on Maria (a squatter in a white-owned farm).

Among the squatters on the same farm as Kgbale was a widow named Maria. Her husband in his lifetime had lived as a tenant on the farm, ploughing in shares until his death. After his death Maria kept on the contract and made a fair living. Her son and daughter aged fourteen and sixteen respectively, took turns at herding cattle and assisting the mother in other ways.

… for Maria, being a widow, and her son being but a youth, it was hoped that the landlord would propose reasonable terms for her; but instead his proposal was that she should dispose of her stock and indenture her children to him. Maria found it difficult to comply with her landlord’s demand. … the landlord then is said to have set fire to Maria’s thatched cottage, … and Maria, with her bedclothes on her head, and on the heads of her son and daughter, and carrying her three-year-old boy tied to her back, walked off from the farm, driving her cows before her. In parting from … their late home, for one blank and unknown, the children were weeping bitterly.

[From: Native Life in South Africa by ST Plaatje]
SOURCE 1C
This source is an extract from a farmer, Mr V, whose real name was not revealed because he would have faced prosecution from the authorities. It indicates how he informed his workers about the decision he took to reverse the implementation of the 1913 Natives Land Act on his farm.

Mr V, the farmer, mounted a handy wagon … and commenced to address the crowd of blacks who gathered around the wagon …

‘Attention! Listen,’ he said. ‘You will remember that I was here last month and explained to you the new law. Well, I understand that the explanation created the greatest amount of unrest among the natives in the huts on my farm. Personally, I am very sorry that it ever came to that, but let me tell you that your Nooi, my wife, says it is not right that the terms under which we have lived in the past should be disturbed. I agree with her that it is unjust, and that the good Lord, who has always blessed us, will turn His face from us if people are unsettled and sent away from the farm in a discontented move.’ (Loud and continued applause …)

‘The Nooi, … says we must not obey the law: she even says, if it comes to physical ejectment, or if they take me to prison, she is prepared to go to Pretoria in person and interview General Botha.

‘ (More cheers, during which the natives dispersed to cart away their mealies amidst general satisfaction.)

SECTION B: ESSAY QUESTION

QUESTION 2A

[Plan and construct an original argument based on evidence using analytical and interpretative skills – L3]

SYNOPSIS

Candidates are expected to critically discuss the social and economic effects of the 1913 Native Land Act on black South Africans.

MAIN ASPECTS

Introduction: Candidates should take a line of argument and indicate how they will support it.

Elaboration

- The Land Act put a stop to sharecropping.
- Led to homelessness and dispossession
- Sharecroppers had to work as labourers on white-owned farms / or move to the areas set aside in the Land Act as native reserves
- Conditions in natives reserves were very poor, with soil erosion, malnutrition and diseases increasing.
- Most of the land that was allocated for reserves was not suitable for farming/ Africans could no longer survive on subsistence farming
- They would have to seek for work outside the reserves in order to support their family.
- Because of the desperate situation it caused, this Act meant that Africans were at the mercy of mining companies and white landowners and could be paid as little as possible.
- It led to further exploitation of black South Africans at the hands of the white minority government.
- As a result many people had to leave the reserves to find work as labourers on white-owned farms/ in mines/ in towns
- In the end they were forced to sell their stock in order to survive
- The only way they could make a living was by selling their own labour
- Any other response
- Conclusion: Candidates to tie up their argument with relevant conclusion.

QUESTION 2B

Synopsis:
Candidates are expected to indicate that the South African War had a negative impact on both the Afrikaners (Boers) and the English people. Candidates can indicate that in the long run the impact was far worse for black people.

Introduction:
The learner must respond directly to the question and provide factual explanation for their point of view.

MAIN ASPECTS

Introduction: Candidates should take a line of argument and indicate how they will support it.

Elaboration:

• Brutal British war strategies: Scorched earth and concentration camps.

• Union of South Africa under Afrikaner government
• Reconciliation policy
• Native Land Act 1913 disempowers the black population on a massive scale.
• Any other relevant response

QUESTION 1: HOW DID THE PORTUGUESE SLAVERY AFFECT THE AFRICAN SOCIETIES?

This source describes how the Portuguese conquest affected the Kongoolese society in the 15th century.

During the 1480s the Portuguese came into contact with the kingdom of Kongo situated south of the Congo River in what is today Northern Angola. The Kongo became powerful through war, capturing and enslaving the people they defeated. The Portuguese did not conquer this region but rather chose to become allies with the Kongo king. The king was eager to make use of Portuguese teachers and craftsmen to train his people. He also allowed Catholic missionaries to work among his people. The Portuguese traded guns for slaves captured by the Kongo in wars against rival kingdoms in the interior. Other than a small amount of copper and raffia cloth, the area did not provide any profitable trade in gold or silver, which was disappointing for the Portuguese. The trafficking in slaves made for this disappointment.

SOURCE 1B
The visual source shows how the slaves in Africa were captured and sent overseas by the Portuguese.

[From https:// www.google.co.za/ imgres?imgurl=http%3A%. Accessed on 13/05/2016]
SOURCE 1C
The source focuses on some of the devastating effects of slavery on African societies.

Aside from the incalculable [countless] personal tragedies (misfortunes) that engulfed [overcame] those caught up in the slave trade, the effects on African societies of a trade in people that by the nineteenth century had spread to draw captives from all but the most isolated regions, have proved remarkably hard to assess. Huge numbers of young men, women and children were lost to the continent altogether, while as many more were forcibly shifted to labour in hostile conditions. Moreover, to the many millions exported we have to add the millions more who died in the course of slave raids, in the arduous (hard) marches to the coast or across the desert, or from disease in the crowded pens of the merchants (dealers) on the coast. Famines caused by wars and raids, and the consequent loss of able-bodied labour must have claimed numerous further victims.

[From: Slaves and Slavery by D Clarkea]

SOURCE 1D
The source below outlines the resistance by some African societies to slavery.

In African societies, there are many examples of opposition to the transatlantic slave trade. One of the earliest documented is the correspondence of the Kongo ruler Nzinga Mbemba (also known as Afonso I, c. 1446–1543) who wrote to the king of Portugal, João III, in 1526 to demand an end to the illegal depopulation of his kingdom. The Kongoese king’s successor Garcia II made similar unsuccessful protests. Other African rulers took a stand. For instance, in the early 17th century Nzinga Mbandi (c. 1583–1663), queen of Ndongo (modern-day Angola), fought against the Portuguese – part of a century-long campaign of resistance waged by the kingdom against the slave trade. Anti-slavery motives can also be found in the activities of the Christian leader Dona Beatriz Kimpa Vita (1684–1706) in Kongo.

QUESTION 1: HOW DID THE MFECA NE LEAD TO A PERIOD OF GREAT DISRUPTION AND POPULATION MOVEMENT IN SOUTHERN AFRICA IN THE 1800s?

This extract, taken from Readers Digest Illustrated History of South Africa, explains the Mfecane and highlights what early historians believed about Shaka’s responsibility.

For generations South African school children were taught how a tyrannical Zulu king named Shaka was responsible for one of the worst periods of black-on-black violence in the history of the subcontinent: the Mfecane (the ‘crushing’).

According to the majority of early historians, Shaka ordered his men to attack every rival – both big and small – after he had built the most powerful army in Africa. The effect was devastating: tens of thousands of people were killed, dozens of chiefdoms were destroyed or assimilated into new, predatory states and wide areas of the highveld were depopulated. This suited the Afrikaner view of history which claims that the Voortrekkers entered undisputed territory.

Even historians sympathetic to the struggle of southern Africa’s indigenous black people tried to provide the Mfecane with legitimacy (credibility). It was, claimed by one prominent historian, a time of state-building in African societies.

By the 1990s, however, many prominent historians had come to the conclusion that the Mfecane did not, indeed in fact, exist. While they agreed that there was indeed disorder among African societies in Natal and on the highveld, they were adamant that Shaka could not be held solely responsible for this.

The least controversial of the reasons offered for the upheaval was the drought of the early 1800s, which sparked fierce competition for resources. The availability of guns from white traders also led to the rise of war-lords, it was claimed. Another, far more controversial theory, was that the disorder which plagued the sub-continent was caused by converging imperialistic thrusts – from the British in the Cape, to acquire labour after the reorganisation of the colony’s labour procurement (acquisition) system and from the Portuguese at Delagoa Bay to supply slaves for their plantations in Brazil.

Below is an extract from Julian Cobbing’s article in which he provides reasons for the Mfecane.

- The wars and migrants of this period were caused by the impact of expanding European colonial settlement and trade in southern Africa.
- Expanding slave trading from the Cape Colony in the south and the Portuguese from Delagoa Bay had contributed to the widespread disruption. This had begun from the middle of the eighteenth century.
- The idea of the Mfecane was a deliberate lie put out by colonial slave trading interests to divert attention away from their activities and explain the violence that followed. He said the Mfecane had its roots in the anti-Shaka writings of British traders who had operated at Port Natal in the 1820s, dealing apparently in ivory but behind the scenes in slaves.

SOURCE 1C
This is an early painting of the first migration of the Fengu, one of the groups affected by the Mfecane.

SOURCE 1D
Some Christian missionaries had moved into the area from the Cape. In this diary entry written in 1823, one of them, Reverend Hodgson, describes finding an abandoned village.

We saw how people had left their homes quickly. Some of the houses were destroyed and others left in a half-ruined state. At a distance we saw three fat dogs. On approaching the centre of the village, we saw a little child sitting by a small house, peeping its worn-out face through the upper part of a small karos (animal skin used as clothing) with which she was covered. The child was a mere skeleton, unable to stand from weakness… It must have been at least 15 days without anyone to communicate with, and most likely without food …. The child is a girl of about 6 years of age, towards whom our hearts were moved with compassion …. I discovered the skulls and other bones of another child …. It looked as though it had recently been eaten up by the dogs or some wild animals, a fate which, but for our visit, the child we had taken in our care probably would have died in a day or two if we didn’t take charge of the child.

Taken from, Bottaro, J. et al. In Search of History (Grade 10) 2005. one of them, Reverend Hodgson, describes finding an abandoned village.

SOURCE 1E
This extract focuses on the results of the Mfecane one of them, Reverend Hodgson, describes finding an abandoned village.

The Mfecane, as it became known, both united and divided the northern Nguni population of Natal. On the one hand, it was responsible for the drawing of clan after clan into the fledgling Zulu state. On the other hand, it sent thousands who refused to accept subjugation into desperate flight to other regions of Southern Africa. Shaka’s new kingdom was built on strict discipline which united hundreds of diverse communities behind the central authority of the king. Although he ruled like a ‘despot’ (having absolute, usually oppressive power), an inner circle of chiefs advised him on matters of national importance and acted as a check on possible abuse of power.

QUESTION 1: WHAT WERE THE CONDITIONS IN FRANCE THAT MADE A REVOLUTION POSSIBLE BY 1789?

SOURCE 1A

This is an extract on the political system in France in the 1780s.

The French Revolution was a political revolution. It started because there were many things about the political system that people in France did not like.

In 1789 France was an absolute monarchy. This meant that a king had the right to appoint all government ministers, and make all decisions and laws. In theory, there was a form of parliament, the Estates General, which consisted of elected representatives. However, it could only meet if the king allowed it to, and no meetings had been held for 175 years. Therefore, the king had total power. Whatever he said would be the law. He could even put people in jail without a trial. The king in 1789 was Louis XVI, who had inherited his position from his grandfather. He was not a good leader. Many educated people in France began to question the system of absolute monarchy.

This source consists of a written extract and a pie graph on the economic situation in France in the 1780s.

Written evidence

France’s economy was in a bad state. The country was in debt, because France had been involved in a number of wars during the 18th Century; and the government had borrowed large sums of money to pay for food, weapons and wages for the army. By the 1780s, it had to borrow more money simply to pay the interest on these debts.

The lifestyle of the king, his family and the royal officials also cost a great deal. The government did not collect enough money in taxes to pay for all of this. Those with wealth — the nobles and the church — did not have to pay taxes. All the taxes were paid by the middle-class and the peasants, many of whom were desperately poor.

Pie Chart

This pie chart shows French government spending in 1786.

SOURCE 1C

This is an account by A Young, a British traveller in France, on how peasants were treated in France, from the book entitled Travels in France during the years 1787 to 1789.

Walking up a hill to help my horse, I was joined by a poor woman, who complained of the times and that it was a sad country. Demanding her reasons, she said her husband had but a morsel (small piece) of land, one cow and a poor little horse, yet they had a franchar (42 pounds) of wheat and three chickens to pay to one Lord, and four francher (a tax to the Lords) of oats, one chicken and a franc to pay to another, besides very heavy tailles (income tax) and other taxes.

This woman, at no great distance, might have been taken for sixty or seventy (years), her figure was so bent and her face so furrowed (wrinkled) and hardened by labour, but she was only twenty-eight (years).

5. Onderwysers moet ‘n duidelike bewoorde taak vir die leerders voorsien. Die taak moet tydramweke vir elke fase en die assessoringskriteria wat vir assessoring gebruik sal word bevat. Die datum in die tydramwerke sal ‘n datum insluit vir wanneer beplanning voltooi moet wee; ‘n datum wanneer rofwerk voltooi moet wee; ‘n datum vir die finale produk. Onderwysers sal die werk vir elke fase kontroleer.
6. Die taak moet die ideologieë en debatte oor erfenis insluit verbind aan die spesifieke monument of gekose onderwerp. Die gekose onderwerp of voorbeeld word gebruik om die debatte te illustreer.
Follow these steps:

1. Class and individual discussions about appropriate monument, museum, tradition, community or chosen heritage example or oral history as heritage.
2. Formulate a key question
3. Do research in the school library, local library or on the internet, if available, about heritage on the particular topic chosen, or provide learners with the sources. Learners must make a selection from the sources that are appropriate for their topic.
4. Learners need to make notes during their research, and they must record information in their own words. Teachers must be particularly vigilant that learners do not simply download and use information from the internet without reworking it. Their assignments must include a list of references consulted.
5. Teachers must provide a clearly worded task for the learners. The task must include timeframes for each stage of the assignment and the assessment criteria that will be used for assessment. The dates within the timeframes will include a date for planning to be completed; a date for rough work to be completed; date for final product. Teachers will check the work at each stage.
6. The assignment needs to include the ideologies and debates about heritage, linked to the particular monument/heritage site or topic chosen. The chosen topic or example must be used to illustrate these debates.

Heritage assignment (compulsory)

The focus and resources for the assignment are heritage sites, museums, monuments, oral histories, commemorative events, family and community traditions and rituals, local history, school history and family history. The content detail is not specified in order to provide the choice to study local, regional or national examples of heritage.

What is heritage?

The word ‘heritage’ can be used in different ways. One use of the word emphasises our heritage as human beings and concerns human origins in Africa. Another use of the word relates to the ways in which people remember the past, through heritage sites, museums, through the construction of monuments and memorials and in families and communities (oral history). Some suggest that heritage is everything that is handed down to us from the past.

The content detail is not specified in order to provide the choice to study local, regional or national examples of heritage.

Possible themes for assignments, which learners should consider, include:

• what is meant by heritage and public representations?;
• memory and oral histories as heritage;
• the importance of the conservation of heritage sites, monuments and memorials;
• debates about heritage issues and the ways in which the past is represented, for example at heritage sites, in museums, monuments and memorials and in families and communities;
• the ways in which memorials are constructed in different knowledge systems, for example monuments, ritual sites and grave sites; and

QUESTION 1:
HOW DID THE EUGENICS MOVEMENT IMPACT ON PEOPLE IN THE USA AND NAZI GERMANY?

SOURCE 1A

This extract explains how Social Darwinism and eugenics were used by those who supported the building of empires.

When Darwin’s theory was applied to humans, it was called Social Darwinism. Its supporters believed that the various human races were at different stages in the process of evolution. It seemed to offer a scientific explanation for the differences between races. This study was called eugenics. Eugenics is the science of improvement of the human race by breeding of the best with the best...Some governments became actively involved in promoting biological engineering, encouraging “superior” people in society to have more children and preventing “inferior” people from having children. Eugenics provided an explanation of how one man could inherently and necessarily be inferior to another by virtue of race alone. …the first half of the 20th century was an age of empires …just when white (superior) power was at its most powerful and widespread. Eugenics helped to ram (forced) it (empires) home: inferior races (blacks and others) were doomed to extinction by natural selection, or could be actively exterminated in the interest of progress.

Riff Raff is an insulting term used to describe members of the lower classes.
SOURCE 1D

This is an extract from a speech given by Dr Gerhard Wagner (Head of Nazi Organisation for Physicians) on Nazi racial policy at the 1936 Nuremberg Rally. It puts emphasis on the benefits of maintaining a racially pure and growing population.

My fellow party members, you know the reasons for our National Socialist population and racial policies. We want to rescue a dying people from the edge of the abyss (dark hole) and lead it back to the paths that will lead, according to human reason, to a future in the coming millennium (period of thousand years). We must oppose the three great dangers of racial and biological decline that have repeatedly destroyed states, peoples, and cultures in the past if they did not succeed in resisting them in good time. We must therefore contend (deal) with these three issues: the decline in the birth rate, the increase in sick and unfit genes in our people, and the mixing of blood of our people with that of foreign and unrelated peoples, in particular with Jewish blood.

QUESTION 1: TO WHAT EXTENT WAS THE NEW DEAL SUCCESSFUL IN RESTORING THE ECONOMY OF THE USA?

This extract explains why Roosevelt wanted to intervene in the economy of the USA.

Roosevelt adopted the economic ideas of John Maynard Keynes, a British economist. Keynes argued that laissez-faire economics could not be used to address a crisis in capitalism, as capitalism would no longer work if it was left to itself. He said that the government had to take the initiative and take over the running of the economy to a large extent. If the government employed tens of thousands of workers this would give them the money to buy goods and this could stimulate demand. As demand increased, factories could increase production or reopen and new factories could be established.

The following extract focuses on the series of legislation passed by President Roosevelt to implement the New Deal.

During the One Hundred Days, Congress enacted 15 major pieces of legislation establishing New Deal agencies and programs. Among these was the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), which was established to protect depositors from losing their savings in the event of bank failure. Another program was the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC), which put thousands of men to work on projects in national forests, parks, and public lands. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration (AAA) was created to ease the desperate plight of the farmer during the Depression by establishing a program of production limits and federal subsidies. To address the problems of industry and workers, Congress passed the National Industrial Recovery Act (NIRA) in June 1933. The NIRA established codes of fair practice for individual industries in order to promote industrial growth. It also created the National Recovery Administration (NRA). The NRA was perhaps one of the most sweeping and controversial of the early New Deal programs. Its purposes were twofold: first, to stabilize business with codes of “fair” competitive practice and, second, to generate more purchasing power by providing jobs, defining labor standards, and raising wages. The NRA also reflected trade union hopes for protection of basic hour and wage standards and liberal hopes for comprehensive planning.

This is an excerpt which focuses on the achievements that the New Deal had on the USA's economy.

‘What did the New Deal achieve? … it had notable positive achievements to its credit. The transformation of the Tennessee Valley under the Tennessee Valley Authority [TVA] from much poverty to a growing measure of prosperity was one. The PWA [Public Works Administration] built on a considerable scale - schools and sewage plants, hospitals, railway stations, bridges, etc. …The WPA [Works Progress Administration] also gave work to writers, painters, sculptors, and actors. But far more significant was the simple fact that the New Deal restored hope to millions of men and women, by providing them with jobs or saving their homes.’

SOURCE 2B

The source is an extract from Roosevelt's first ‘fireside chat’ on the banking crisis that occurred on 12 March 1933.

....... We had a bad banking situation. Some of our bankers had shown themselves either incompetent or dishonest in their handling of the people’s funds. They had used the money entrusted to them in speculations and unwise loans. This was of course not true in the vast majority of our banks but it was true in enough of them to shock the people for a time into a sense of insecurity and to put them into a frame of mind where they did not differentiate, but seemed to assume that the acts of a comparative few had tainted them all. It was the Government’s job to straighten out this situation and do it as quickly as possible... and the job is being performed.

I do not promise you that every bank will be reopened or that individuals losses will not be suffered, but there will be no losses that possibly could be avoided; and there would have been more and greater losses had we continued to drift. I can even promise you salvation for some at least of the sorely pressed banks. We shall be engaged not merely in reopening sound banks but in the creation of sound banks through reorganization. It has been wonderful to me to catch the note of confidence from all over the country. I can never be sufficiently grateful to the people for the loyal support they have given me in their acceptance of the judgement that has dictated our course, even though all of our processes may not have seemed clear to them.

After all there is an element in the readjustment of our financial system more important than currency, more important than gold, and that is the confidence of the people. Confidence and courage are the essentials of success in carrying out our plan. You people must have faith; you must not be stampeded by rumors or guesses. Let us unite in banishing fear. We have provided the machinery to restore our financial system; it is up to you to support and make it work. It is your problem no less than it is mine. Together we cannot fail.
```

The source below outlines the challenges faced by President F.D. Roosevelt’s New Deal between 1935 and 1937.

Despite the efforts of President Roosevelt and his cabinet, however, the Great Depression continued, the nation’s economy continued to wheeze (gasp); unemployment persisted; and people grew angrier and more desperate.

So, in the spring of 1935, Roosevelt launched a second, more aggressive series of federal programs, sometimes called the Second New Deal. In April, he created the Works Progress Administration (WPA) to provide jobs for unemployed people. WPA projects weren’t allowed to compete with private industry, so they focused on building things like post offices, bridges, schools, highways and parks. The WPA also gave work to artists, writers, theatre directors and musicians.

In July 1935, the National Labor Relations Act, also known as the Wagner Act, created the National Labor Relations Board to supervise union elections and prevent businesses from treating their workers unfairly. In August, FDR signed the Social Security Act of 1935, which guaranteed pensions to millions of Americans, set up a system of unemployment insurance and stipulated that the federal government would help care for dependent children and the disabled.

In 1936...FDR told a roaring crowd at Madison Square Garden that “The forces of ‘organized money’ are unanimous in their hate for me – and I welcome their hatred.”

He went on: “I should like to have it said of my first Administration that in it the forces of selfishness and of lust for power met their match, [and] I should like to have it said of my second Administration that in it these forces have met their master.”

The following cartoon titled ‘Boo – Hoo….’ depicts the effects of President Roosevelt’s New Deal on the USA.

SECTION B: ESSAY QUESTION

QUESTION 2: APARTHEID SOUTH AFRICA

The election victory of the National Party in 1948 forced the liberation movement to adopt a more militant approach in their resistance to apartheid between 1948 and 1960. Critically discuss this statement with reference to the various forms of resistance to apartheid by the liberation movement.
QUESTION 1: HOW DID AFRICANS AND AFRIKANERS EXPRESS THEIR NATIONALISMS IN SOUTH AFRICA?

SOURCE 1A.
The following extract defines the different forms of nationalisms in South Africa.

Nationalism still plays a vital role in history. Nationalism can unite diverse groups in a country and give people a sense of belonging.
Positive nationalism binds people living in the same country together. People feel pride in their country, culture and heritage. Good citizenship and social justice are important features of positive nationalism. People stand together in times of hardship such as economic recessions and natural disasters.
Negative nationalism leads to competition between countries that often results in war. Negative nationalism is often associated with racism and division in a country.
Nationalism in South Africa has played a key role in both uniting and dividing the country. Afrikaner nationalism was initially positive and aimed to unite and uplift the Afrikaans speaking people. The National Party however, adopted negative nationalism by excluding other South Africans from opportunities based on colour. African nationalism in South Africa stressed a pride in being black and attempted to unite the diverse black ethnic and cultural groups.

[From: New Generation History Grade 11.]

SOURCE 1B.
The excerpt below highlights the Freedom Charter’s definition of nationalism.
In 1955 the ANC explained which form of nationalism it supported in the Freedom Charter, which rejected race as a means of defining African nationalism. It called for a democratic government for all South Africans regardless of race.
It defined the South African nation as all who lived in it, white and black. This non-racial nationalism is known as Charterism. The Freedom Charter further stated that South Africa would never be prosperous or free until all people live in brotherhood, enjoying equal rights and opportunities and that only a democratic state, based on the will of all the people, can secure to all their birth right without distinction of colour, race, sex or belief.

[From: New Generation History Grade 11.]

SOURCE 1C.
This is an analysis of the importance of the Eeufees (Centenary Celebrations) in Afrikaner nationalism during the 1930’s.
Of particular importance in moulding Afrikaner identity during the 1930s were the centenary celebrations of the Great Trek in 1938. The Great Trek has assumed pride and place in Afrikaner history and was commemorated by nine ox wagons making their way from Cape Town to the north. This symbolic trek paralleled the economic trek that Afrikaners had to make from an economic depression which reduced large numbers to the ranks of poor whites.
At the heart of the 1938 celebrations lay the perception that Afrikaners were strangers in their own land, victims of British-rooted capitalism and an alien political culture and that the solution lay in political, economic and cultural action. Indeed, as fractured as the Afrikaners were, the 1938 celebrations served as a powerful binding agent.

This cartoon appeared in an Afrikaans newspaper in 1945. It shows Malan, leader of the National Party, pointing to the Swart Gevaar. (Black Threat)
