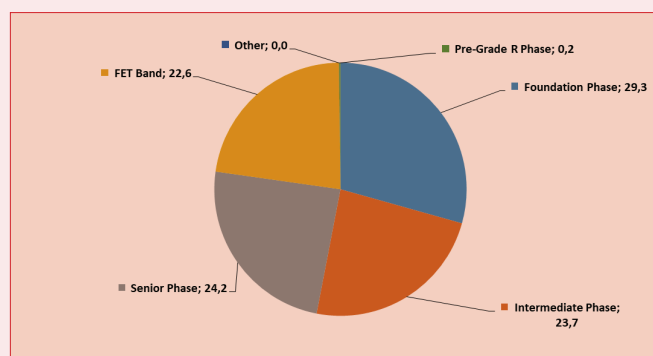

Figure 1 reveals that the highest proportion of learners in ordinary schools nationally was in the foundation phase (29.3%), followed by the senior phase and the intermediate phase, with 24.2% and 23.7%, respectively.

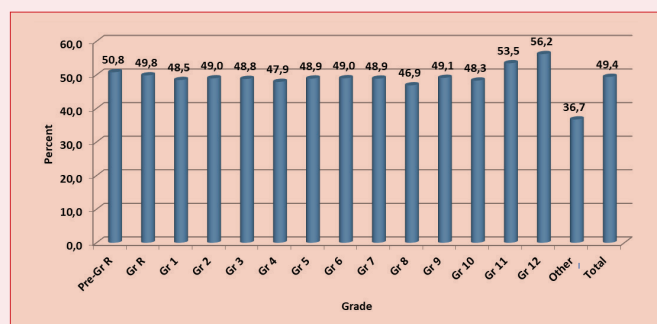

Figure 2 shows that, in the schooling system, there were more male than female (49.4%) learners. The lowest percentage of female learners in ordinary schools nationally was in Grades 8 (46.9%), and the highest percentage was in Grades 11 and 12 (53.5% and 56.2% respectively).

Figure 3: Percentage distribution of learners in ordinary schools, by grade, in 2025

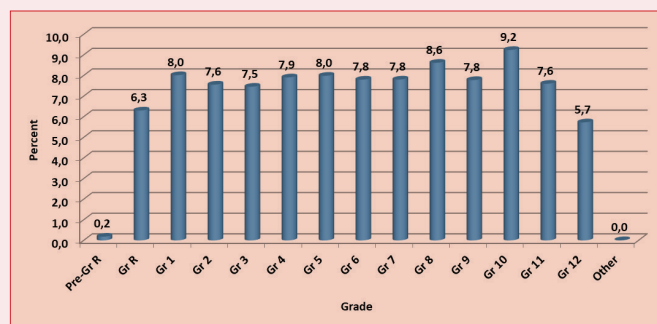

Figure 3 indicates that enrolment is generally very high in Grades 10 (9.2%) and declines as learners move to higher grades within the schooling system, with 5.7% in Grade 12.

Table 5 reflects the following indicators:

- When counting all educators, the LER for ordinary public schools nationally was 30.6, while, when counting only state-paid educators in these schools, the LER increased to 34.0.
- The LSR for ordinary public schools nationally was 577, with five provinces (Free State, Gauteng, Mpumalanga, North West and the Western Cape) higher than the national average.

1) Underlying data not shown in the publication.

- The ESR for ordinary public schools nationally was 18.5, with four provinces (Free State, Gauteng, Limpopo, Mpumalanga and the Western Cape) higher than the national average.

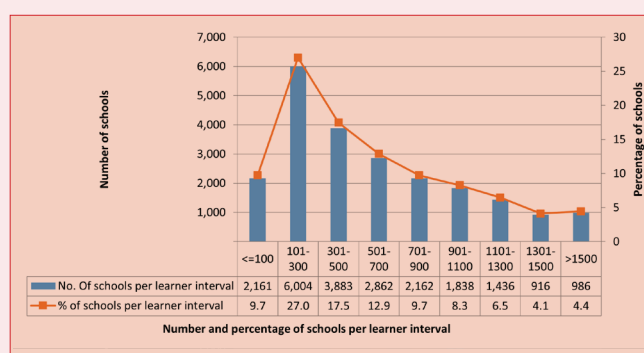

Figure 4, a histogram, shows that the highest number of ordinary public schools nationally (6 004 or 27.0%) was in the 101 to 300 learner interval. Furthermore, there were 3 883 schools (17.5%) in the 301 to 500 learner interval and 986 schools (4.4%) in the above 1 500 learner interval.

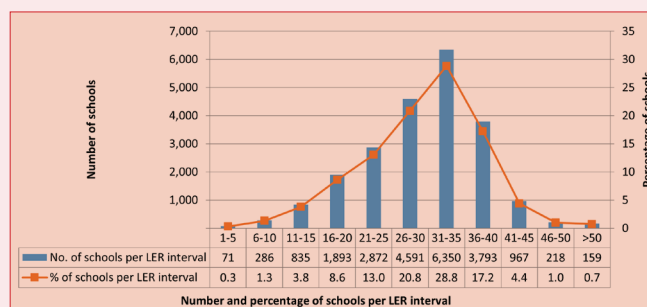

Figure 5, a histogram, reflects that the highest number of ordinary public schools nationally (6 350, or 28.8%) was in the 31 to 35 LER interval. Furthermore, there were 71 schools (0.3%) and 159 schools (0.7%) in the 1 to 5 LER interval and the above 50 LER interval, respectively.
